

Council makes loan to performing arts group

The Seaside City Council became a patron of the arts last week.

It granted a $3,000 interest-free loan for a period of one year to the financially ailing Seaside Performing Arts Association until that organization can start its planned series of performances.

With little notice, the council was asked in a letter from Bedford Vaughn, president of the organization, for financial aid in the amount of $5,000, or not less than $3,000. Vaughn said the owners of the Del Reay Theater, where the organization is located, are pressing for expenses to be met and there isn't enough cash to meet the demands.

"We're just organized to the point that we're able to present a program," Vaughn told the council at its Thursday meeting. "This request is needed since we haven't had the time to develop activities to become self-sustaining."

Vaughn said the group plans seven concerts, starting Feb. 14, three days, a talent show, a summer theater workshop, regular motion pictures, and other activities. The association is not incorporated but has applied for status as a non-profit organization.

Councilman Joe Cota said the responsibility of the city council in handling taxpayers' money is to act like responsible businessmen.

"If we allow you some money at this time," he remarked, "we'd have to go into your organization as much as we would at budget time."

The Seaside Performing Arts Association already has asked the city for financial support in its 1975-76 budget, but that budget will not be pieced together until the spring, and will not take effect until July 1.

City Mgr. Dudley Lapham said funds for the organization might come from community development monies allocated to the city from the federal government, but that even that would take at least three weeks.

"I think it's a worthwhile program and I'd like to see the council help," said Councilman Oscar Lawson.

City Atty. Carey Royster said he saw no legal reason why the city could not approve a loan to the organization, even though it is not legally incorporated.

The loan was approved on the condition that a full audit be conducted by the city staff to determine the financial condition of the organization, followed by monthly reviews thereafter.

In another matter, the city council laid to rest the dispute between Adeline Di Lorenzo of Carmel and the city over her proposed Williams and Richards subdivisions. After considerable debate, the council voted, with the dissent of Councilman Glenn Olea, to accept the final improvements to both parcels.

Larry Lichtenegger, attorney for Mrs. Di Lorenzo, said the developer would install whatever wall is required for the project to meet city standards. Mayor B.J. Dolan pointed out that the council's concern was with a section of graded land apparently in need of a retaining wall.

But Councilman Oscar Lawson said "it's not in our area of jurisdiction worrying about whether a fence will be put up there."

Vince Di Lorenzo of Seaside, Mrs. Di Lorenzo's son, said "you're involving yourself in what might become a dispute between two property owners. It isn't even a dispute yet. It's not a city problem."

City Atty. Carey Royster reminded the city council that the tentative map for the project was approved with the subdivision, and the only consideration before the council was whether the final map coincided substantially with the tentative map.

"The city council is concerned with health and safety concerns," Royster said. "Maintaining a fence is not a matter of safety and health. These concerns are supposed to be dealt with in the tentative map stage. The matter is a civil problem."

Councilman Glenn Olea was the only member of the council voting against final acceptance of the subdivision plans.

The city council also voted to accept a low bid of $21,863 from Daniels and House Construction Co. of Monterey for the construction of city water well No. 3.

Human relations highlighted in conference at Seaside High School

"The point of the 1970s is that you respect me because I'm different and I respect you because you're different."

On the anniversary of Martin Luther King's birthday last Wednesday, a collection of teachers, educators, and administrators in the Monterey Peninsula Unified School District was given that message by Dianne Feinstein, president of the San Francisco board of supervisors, during a staff in-service day at Seaside High School.

Mrs. Feinstein was the afternoon keynote speaker on the program that featured human relations as its theme. Leafing through the program booklet for the conference, she raised her arm and asked:

"Where are the women?"

The program listing included multi-cultural dances and foods, as well as a host of seminars dealing with a multiplicity of human relations problems. None was devoted specifically to the status of women.

"Women have had a hard time," Mrs. Feinstein said. "They had to fight for the vote, and they've been fighting for equality under the law. We should share the burden of the draft and the military equally with the men."

"Women work because, like men, they have to. And yet, less than 10 per cent take home more than $10,000 a year."

Mrs. Feinstein pointed out that class action lawsuits against large corporations have brought women many millions of dollars in back pay denied them because of sex discrimination.

"We're going through a tremendous revolution in our stereotypes in this country. We've learned we're being environmentally stereotyped from an early age," she said, referring to social conditioning according to sex. This takes the form, Mrs. Feinstein said, of giving girls typical "feminine" playthings and denying them other playthings and activities that might enable to envision themselves outside the traditional female role.

"The whole point of these stereotypes is that Martin Luther King's life was not in vain, nor will his death be," she asserted.

Mrs. Feinstein said statistics show that "the white, middle-class has left San Francisco," with 42 per cent of that city's population now classified as non-white, 30 per cent of its population above the age of 60, and one-sixth of its population receiving food stamps.

"We all believe the best pattern is an integrated one," she said. "This means bilingual programs should be truly bilingual. The English-speaking student should be required to learn English."

Mrs. Feinstein called upon the educators to loose sight of the fundamentals in education, stressing that merely passing every student through the grades without regard to academic mastery eventually creates social problems.

"The student who gets out of high school thinking he has passed, when he's really failed, is a fallacy. What happens when that student finds out? A tremendous amount of anger is directed at the system."

Mrs. Feinstein said adjustments and difficulties are a part of having a democracy, and things only run smoothly in totalitarian states where dissent is not tolerated. Nevertheless, she said, the extreme right-wing and extreme left-wing groups that have sprung up in America are not healthy.

"I found that most of the members of the SLA (Symbionese Liberation Army) were products of our school systems," she said. "Not one of the members of the SLA ever tried in any constructive way to make change."

Mrs. Feinstein said her discussions with the SDS (Students for a Democratic Society) proved that its members could point out easily all of the faults with democracy, but could offer previous few suggestions for improvement.

"There never has been a country that's fed more people

Coffee shop given council approval

Concerned about the possible transplantation of a social problem from the infamous "pit" area to another part of town, the Seaside City Council last Thursday approved a six-month temporary use permit for a coffee house at 1576 Del Monte.

Although the use permit had been granted with no time limits by the planning commission, that action was appealed to the council by Seaside realtor Richard M. Challis, who said the applicant, Mattie Veal, wants to move a business from "the pit" to another part of Seaside.

Challis said he and other businessmen and residents in the area feared that this would be tantamount to bringing many of the problems from that area with the business. Specifically, Challis said he referred to the problems of drugs and prostitution.

"I have three rental units there," Challis told the council. "There are two businesses on the other side, located near the old city hall. The people in business alongside me have rights, too."

"If the permit is approved, the business will be in that direction. Will we have another pit area in that part of town? And if it's used for any purpose other than what is applied for, what can we do?"

Planning Director William Burris told the council that the planning commission had attached several conditions to the use permit at the time it was approved. One of the principal concerns of the planning commission was whether the coffee shop use would become a pool parlor or spot for the operation of coin-fed game machines.

Mayor B.J. Dolan asked Challis what legal basis his appeal was founded upon, and Challis replied that its approval would raise the question of how many businesses of a particular type, whether permitted according to zoning or not, are proper.

"This is a highway service zone," Challis said. "We have two coffee shops already. What need is there for another?"

Challis also admitted that his concerns about the business were founded upon "assumptions" that possible problems would arise.

Joseph F. Landreth, attorney for the applicant, said his client would be willing to go along with any reasonable conditions upon the granting of the use permit, but said the city council could not deny it on the presumption that something might happen detrimental to the city.

"If he violates the use permit, you can take it away," Landreth said. "You can tear it down as a nuisance. But I don't believe a person can, on sheer conjecture, be denied the right to go into business."

Dolan said "there is a great concern in this city about prostitution, drugs, and the

"A SACK FULL OF MONEY" is the reward for Capt. Douglas Swartz (left) and Capt. John Rice of Fort Ord's Combat Development Experimentation Command (CDEC) whose design for sophisticated electronic equipment has already saved the Army $1.5 million. Making the presentation is Brig. Gen. Donald Packard (center).

Fort Ord soldiers invent sophisticated instrument system

"Building a better mousetrap" will bring recognition and more than $5,000 for two soldier-scientists with the Army Combat Developments Experimentation Command at Fort Ord.

Working in the engineering division of CDEC's Deputy Chief of Staff for Instrumentation, Capt. John Rice and Captain Douglas Swartz designed and built the prototype for the Modular Integrated Pallet System (MIPS).

Rice and Swartz share a $1,500 cash award from the Incentive Awards committee at Fort Ord. "That's the limit we are authorized to give locally," explained Charles E. Gibson, chairman of the committee, "and is the largest amount I remember ever being awarded here."

The MIPS suggestion has been forwarded to the Army's Training and Doctrine Command at Fort Monroe, Va., to obtain additional financial awards. It may be eligible for further cash awards when reviewed by the Department of the Army.

Both men also received the Army Commendation Medal for "...working after duty hours...under severe time and financial constraints...developing three prototype systems... (that) will save several million dollars in future experimentation."

The Army has already realized a $1.5 million savings by incorporating the MIPS into the budgeting and planning for future CDEC field experiments to be conducted during fiscal year 1976 at Hunter Liggett Military Reservation.

In many field trials, CDEC installs electronic systems on tanks taking part in the experiments. The equipment was previously mounted on a metal plate, or pallet. The sophisticated electronic equipment works in conjunction with the range measuring system and the central computer to keep a constant check on the location of a tank and what it is doing and what is happening to it.

Rather than performing drastically new functions, the modular unit designed by Rice and Swartz is far more efficient and economical than the several existing systems it replaces. The new unit weighs 35 lbs. compared to 350 lbs. for the previous pallet system. It requires one power source rather than the eight or nine different sources required previously; a factor that in field tests has resulted in 10 times longer life for batteries.

Probably the greatest potential savings in time and manpower will be realized in preparation time for field trials. Whereas the previous system frequently required hours of "warm-up" and "check-out" time, the MIPS can be checked, calibrated and readied within minutes. With the new system, CDEC can increase the number of field experimentation trials per day, resulting in more efficient schedule.

Not only is the new system lighter in weight, more efficient and trouble-free, it may be produced at a substantially lower cost per unit.

"We've also anticipated in our design," said Rice. "We can incorporate future needs into the existing system merely by 'plugging in' an additional unit. The old system would have required extensive modification. In the past we've had to use one system to perform a given function, another system for another function, and so on. Each unit had its own power requirements, had to be manually synchronized and made compatible with all the other systems, and we had to rely on endless numbers of cables to condition all the data for transfer to the computer."

"It was a kind of Rube Goldberg arrangement," he said, "and had many inherent maintenance problems. We've eliminated most of that by designing the separate parts to work together as a unit. We tried for efficiency and simplicity and I think we succeeded."

Ethnic studies courses offered through community college program at MPC

Monterey Peninsula College's (MPC's) Ethnic Studies Division is continuing to extend its curriculum offerings into the local communities as an effort to make the division more useful to ethnic minorities.

James C. Stevenson, Sr., the division chairman, said three new courses will be offered in the local communities during the spring semester. The courses will be: The Chicano Experience in American Society, 6:45 p.m. to 9:45 p.m., each Monday evening, at The Neighborhood Center, Lighthouse and Dickman, in New Monterey. Instructor, Al Espinoza, will analyze the social and historical impact that America's racially discriminatory policies have had on the Chicano (Mexican-American) during the past 200 years. More emphasis will be placed on the 20th Century.

Conversational Tagalog, the Filipino-American language, will be offered at King Junior High, in Seaside, each Thursday from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. It will be taught by Mrs. Rebecca Maquillan, who will emphasize the development of a useful vocabulary and common expressions necessary in the daily lives of the Filipino-American communities.

A third new course in the community will be Political Science, Afro-Americans in American Government, and will be offered each Friday from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. at Covell School in Seaside. The course will be taught by Calvin Nance, who will also be teaching the same course at Fort Ord. This course stresses the participation and contributions of Black Americans in the development of the American governmental system. Emphasis will be placed on civil rights, welfare, structure and powers, of legislature, executive and judicial departments, and current problems in local and national governments.

Other courses offered by the division and taught off-campus will include: Filipino American History, each Monday from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m., in Marina, and Psychology of Minority Families, from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m., each Wednesday evening, at Covell School, in Seaside.

The new on-campus courses this coming semester will be: English 260L, offered in the evening division each Wednesday from 6:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. The course will be taught by Lonnie Huff and is designed to help ethnic minority students develop written and verbal skills for better interpersonal communications on a day-to-day basis.

In honor of the art judges who juried the Seaside Art Competitive last November, the Seaside Art Commission is presenting a two-man show this month by Royden Martin and Miguel Dominguez, both Carmel artists of prize-winning fame.

Mary Beach, the other judge, had her one-women show last year already in Seaside City Hall Gallery. This January's exhibit will run until Jan. 31.

Royden Martin has lived in Carmel most of his life. He attended the California School of Fine Arts, earned the Ann Bremer Scholarship, and studied art with many private tutors. He is an active member of the Carmel Art Association. He was the only member who was born in Carmel. He served as officer of that organization, as well. He served in the military for four years in the Army during World War II, and he has traveled extensively throughout the U.S., England, France, Belgium, Germany and Australia.

A thoroughly dedicated artist, he devotes full time to painting. A master in his profession, matured both intellectually and emotionally, he brings a unique combination of gifts to his art works. In the City Hall one can see his beautifully painted ballet dancers in action, full of grace and charm.

His nudes are in exquisite taste, executed in oil on a gold leaf background; they come richly alive. He has justifiably received much acclaim and recognition for his portrait studies too. He works with equal and unexcelled facility in oil, watercolor, pastel or charcoal.

Miguel Dominguez is a graphic artist who employs the dry brush with pen and ink techniques to render his drawings. His works seem to have the sensitive subtlety of the Oriental watercolorist. He was born in El Paso, Tex., and was raised in Gonzales. He now resides in Carmel with his wife and a son. He has won many prizes locally and has exhibited in various places.

Dominguez's drawings show maturity, richness of textures, and the design of his white spaces leaves one free to think. Being a traditional realist does not preclude him from interpreting and experimenting, he says.

On-campus registration for spring semester commences

Spring on-campus registration for open day and evening classes at Monterey Peninsula College will be held the last three days of January and more than 1,200 students and community members are expected to enroll.

Registration appointments can now be made for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Jan. 29-31, for a "personalized" registration time

Symphony to give a matinee concert

The Monterey County Symphony under the direction of Haymo Taeuber will present the second matinee concert of a three-concert series to be performed by the 30-member Little Symphony Orchestra at 3 p.m. Feb. 9 at Sunset Center, Carmel.

The featured soloist will be the Symphony's first artist in residence, Dwight Carver, performing Mozart's Horn Concerto in E-flat Major, K. 447. Carver was principal horn with the Metropolitan Opera National Company as well as assistant principal horn with San Francisco Symphony, at which time he commuted to play with Monterey County Symphony.

He has been principal horn with Phoenix, North Carolina and San Diego symphonies, and toured with the Stan Kenton Orchestra for two years.

The program opens with Sibelius' Andante Festivo and includes Mozart's Symphony in A Major, No. 29, K. 201, Tchaikovsky's Serenade for Strings, and Gli Uccelli (The Birds), by Respighi.

The first concert of the series which is co-sponsored by the National Endowment for the Arts, received excellent reviews, one of which stated, "an afternoon of sheer musical delight in a concert that could not, under any circumstances have been better programmed or executed."

Tickets are available at the usual Symphony outlets and at the box office the afternoon of performance. For further information please call 624-8511, the Symphony Office, Carmel.

Adult art classes offered

Beginners, intermediate and advanced students interested in drawing and painting in various media are invited to join the adult art classes conducted by C. Y. Lee, M.A. from University of California, under the Pacific Grove and Monterey Adult Schools.

Elements of art, color and design, techniques in drawing, watercolor, oil and acrylic paintings are taught in the evening sessions. On Tuesday and Thursday nights from 7:30 p.m. to 10 p.m. Lee's class will meet in Room I-1, Pacific Grove High School, and on Wednesday from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. his class will meet in Room 2, Fremont Jr. High School in Seaside.

Both classes require a nominal fee for registration, and students are to buy their own supplies. Lee is chairman of the Seaside Art Commission and has been an adult educator since 1949.

He has taught the Pacific Grove Adult Art Class since 1957 and the Fremont Class since 1972. For more information please call Lee at 394-2965, Mr. Heyl, the Principal at P.G. at 373-4951, or Mr. Anderson, the director of Adult School at 649-7336 or 649-7386.

Classes will begin the following week.

Late registration for classes will be held by appointment Feb. 3-8 and 10-14. Monday through Thursday registration hours will be 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. and from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Fridays. Registration hours on Saturday, Feb. 8, will be from 9 a.m. to noon.

Nearly 6,500 students have registered for classes since Nov. 15 and the total will reach over 7,500 after the mail registration applications are processed in the next few days.

In light of the college's rapid growth over the last several semesters, spring classes were planned around an expected student population approaching 10,000. More than 9,000 students were enrolled in MPC classes during the fall semester.

Art field trip planned

To celebrate the Chinese New Year, the Year of the Hare, which arrived Feb. 11, an art field trip to visit San Francisco's Chinatown, deYoung Museum, and Chinese art galleries is being planned by the Seaside Art Commission, with tentative date of trip from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 22.

As in the past, a chartered bus will take the group first to Golden Gate Park to see the beautiful and always fantastic Avery Brundage Collection of Oriental arts, especially the Chinese section, then to visit some private studios or galleries of Chinese painters, and to Chinatown to see the various cultural displays, kung-fu demonstration, art exhibits, and photo exhibits.

There are only 35 seats available, according to Charles Y. Lee, your director, and it is "first come, first served." The deadline for reservation is Feb. 11. Anyone interested please call Mrs. Lee at 394-2965.

A family-style Chinese dinner is always included in this tour, and charming hosts and hostesses will show how chopsticks are used. At least one hour will be for free shopping time, so that the passengers of the bus may purchase some souvenirs.

Seaside Dolphins gear up

By Mary Teresa McDaniel

Seaside Dolphins, the second grade Blue Birds, are starting the new year with many fun things to do. Last month they went to the senior citizen Christmas party given by the Monterey Peninsula Camp Fire Girls.

We have elected officers for the group. For our craft this week we did pastel paintings on velvet. It was fun. We sang songs and made plans for our field trip to the re-cycling center for our next meeting. We mashed aluminum cans to turn in and earn money for our group to make a banner for the Marina Parade this spring.

Our hostess for refreshments this week was Mary Teresa.

degradation of some of our young girls. The general concern of people in the area is that governmental agencies should do nothing to promote that..."

Councilman Glenn Olea said it appeared to him that the trend in that section of town is toward a "San Francisco Broadway" cluster of businesses, and he said he was concerned for the "social situation" of the entire city.

"It's unfortunate that this applicant was a part of 'the pit,'" remarked Councilman Joe Cota. "Because we're allowing a place where people can assemble, we're creating something we don't want to create."

Cota said he was concerned that the business would not be able to generate sufficient revenue from the sale of sandwiches, soft drinks, coffee, cakes, and cigarettes to stay solvent, and this might lead to other, undesirable, activities.

Councilman Steve Ross said he was "very reluctant" to attach unusual conditions to the use permit simply because of the former location of the applicant's business.

"This council has a responsibility not to throw gasoline on an area that's already inflamed," commented Councilman Oscar Lawson. "In fact, it's burning!"

MRS. GRACE HENNINGTON of Seaside has been chosen by the national board of the American Association of Retired Persons to serve as assistant director of Northern California. General Education Program Offered Community

Reservations are still available for Gentrain, the interdisciplinary general education program which this spring will travel from the "Foundations of the Modern World" to "The Future" at Monterey Peninsula College.

Gentrain, a general educational train of courses, began its unique educational journey in September by taking two-week trips through history covering western civilization from "Prehistory" to "Renaissance and the Reformation" during the fall.

The program is designed to allow students to earn up to 16 units a year in a series of two-week blocks of time. Credit earned satisfies MPC requirements in general education. Credits are applied to the appropriate requirement area depending on which two-week segments students complete.

Gentrain creator Philip C. Nash, associate dean of instruction, said, "the uniqueness of the program lies in the drop-in, drop-out concept which allows students to come aboard the train of mini-courses at the beginning of any two-week unit and stay for as long as they wish."

Gentrain employs a team of five instructors, called conductors, representing backgrounds in art, drama, literature, music, philosophy and religion. Guest speakers are brought in to cover areas of special concern and the courses also include films, music, dramatic readings and field trips.

Commenting on Gentrain experiences, Richard Ridenour, Gentrain director, noted that the program has attracted a broad range of students.

"We have some with university M.A.'s who are professionals in their fields, and some who can barely read, but our flexibility of format, with large group-small group instruction and independence in selecting work to do, and variety of material and media provide something for everyone," Ridenour said.

"More important than the educational level, however, is the social background of the students. It seems this semester that our students fall roughly into three categories - evenly distributed: students seeking college credit; veterans; and community members with an interest in the subject."

Ridenour emphasized that although Gentrain is designed to help students meet general educational requirements, it also aims at the broader community as well. Retired residents of the community are especially welcomed in the Gentrain program.

Residents may now sign up for Gentrain courses on an adult education basis where no tests or papers are required and readings are not mandatory, he stated. Courses can simply be taken for enjoyment and self-enrichment.

Gentrain classes meet four hours a day, two days a week, from 10 a.m. to noon and from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Spring semester Gentrain mini-courses, listed under Interdisciplinary Studies 112, and starting dates include:

--"Foundations of the Modern World, 1560-1660." Feb. 4.

--"The Age of Reason, Part 1, 1160-1715." Feb. 18.

--"The Age of Reason, Part 11, 1715-1790." March 4.

--"The 19th Century, Part 1, 1790-1860." April 1.

--"The 19th Century, Part 11, 1860-1914." April 15.

--"The 20th Century, Part 1, 1914-1945." April 29.

Dolan quits crime committee

Seaside Mayor B. J. Dolan resigned last Friday from the Community Crime Abatement Committee.

His letter of resignation to Councilman Steve Ross said:

"Due to circumstances involving the principle of keeping political commitments which could or could not be construed to be in the best interests of the city of Seaside, the undersigned, with regrets, hereby resigns from the Community Crime Abatement Committee effective immediately."

Council makes appointments

The Seaside City Council appointed Donald Likas of 1630 Kimbal Ave. last Thursday to fill the unexpired term on the planning commission of the late Custin C. Palmer. The term expires Nov. 18.

The council also appointed two members to the Seaside Art Commission. They are Robert Brothers and Mrs. Drusilla Keller.

Bowling class offered in Monterey

The City of Monterey Park and Recreation Department and Cypress Bowl will co-sponsor a beginning bowlers' instruction class for women at Cypress Bowl, 2450 Fremont St. in Monterey.

The program will begin Wednesday, Jan. 22, and run for four consecutive weeks, meeting for one hour from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m.

Registration fee for this introductory "Learn to Bowl" program is $2.50 which includes shoes, instruction and bowling.

An added service is a nursery for mothers who join the program.

Women are to register directly at Cypress Bowl.

Comparison of literature and film offered in course

With some exception, it has been said that good books make bad movies and bad books made good movies. Now, students can decide for themselves with a new English course at Monterey peninsula College called "Novel into Film."

During the spring semester, which starts Feb. 3, students will be able to read the best of novels and then see the best of films. Elliot Roberts and Les High are team-teaching the course.

"Novels into Film" will provide students with the opportunity to reach such authors as Dashiell Hammett, Robert Penn Warren, John Steinbeck, Vladimir Nabokov and Ernest Hemingway and then make comparisons with such classic films as "The Maltese Falcon," "All the King's Men," "Grapes of Wrath," "Lolita," and "A Farewell to Arms."

"It also is a great opportunity to critically study and enjoy such acting greats as Humphrey Bogart, Peter Lorre, Sidney Greenstreet, Mary Astor, Broderick Crawford, Henry Fonda, Peter Sellers, Sue Lyon, Gary Cooper, Jennifer Jones and many others," said Roberts.

One of the unique features of the class is that it is organized so that community members and students can participate and earn varying amounts of college credit. The course can be taken as English 915 on a non-credit basis by community members who just want to read the novels, see the movies and attend class. As English 515, the class is a non-transfer course for MPC credit only and requires some additional written work. As English 115, "Novels into Film" requires additional assignments and tests and carries transferable college credit.

The courses will be offered Tuesdays from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. with discussion periods at 11 a.m. and at noon on Thursdays. The courses are also offered from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. on Tuesday evenings.

Registration can be completed on Wednesday, Thursday, or Friday, Jan. 29-31 in the Student Services Building or during late registration through Feb. 14. For more information call the MPC Registration Desk at 649-1150, ext. 217 or Roberts at ext. 398.

Before Fritzsche Airfield was built, Ford Ord's air facility consisted of the landing strip now known as the South Parade Field. Two hip-roofed hangars were built at the east end and there was a small control tower near the present reviewing stand and bleacher area.

Work began in 1958 on the new airfield on Fort Ord land which lies along the Salinas River, and Fritzsche Army airfield was dedicated and named in memory of the post commander, Maj. Gen. Carl F. Fritzsche, who was killed in an air crash in 1960.

The south Parade Field was extended and resurfaced to become one of the most extensive black-topped parade grounds in the Army. The hangars were used for warehouses and storage facilities after their aircraft maintenance tools and equipment were moved to the new airfield north of the post.

Upon activation of the 7th Infantry Division, a new interest has developed in the long, wide strip of asphalt, the two hangars and large quonset-type metal buildings. The site has been picked for the 707th Maintenance Battalion shop area.

Maintenance people envision the installation of portable buildings along the periphery of the area to augment the two hangars and four quonset structures, plus elevated racks where technicians will care for the mass of vehicles which will assure mobility for the Infantry Division.

In addition to entrances to the maintenance shops from the North-South road, engineers plan to have two access roads from the east-west traffic artery of First Street.

Concerned seniors ask for bike ban

The Concerned Senior Citizens of the Monterey Peninsula has presented a petition to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors calling upon that agency to pass an ordinance making it illegal to ride bicycles or motorcycles on sidewalks.

George Herman of Marina, president of the organization, said many senior citizens and others have been frightened and some have been injured while strolling or shopping on sidewalks.

Herman also stated there is evidence that efforts to get seniors to ride on Joint Powers Agency buses for half fare are having some success.

The organization meets every fourth Monday at 2:30 p.m. in the conference room of San Diego Federal Savings in Monterey. The next meeting is Jan. 27.

'Bayonet' is well-decorated soldier

The newest rookie with the 7th Division at Fort Ord is a Sergeant Major -- one SGM "Bayonet," brought into service at the Main Exchange about Christmas time.

He is dubbed "Bayonet" in honor of the 7th (Bayonet) Infantry Division.

A well decorated soldier, the Post Exchange manikin shows incoming troops what the well-decorated Infantryman might wear if assigned to a particular unit of the famed fighting force, and if he meets certain other criteria.

SGM Bayonet's right shoulder, for example, is looped with an Infantry Blue Braid which may be worn by those who hold a Combat Infantryman Badge or Expert Infantryman Badge, or are assigned to a unit which has successfully completed the Combat Readiness Test.

Above the right blouse pocket are three unit citations which also may be worn under certain conditions. The burgundy badge with gold trim is the Meritorious Unit Commendation, and may be authorized for wear by a unit commander, depending on the unit's combat history.

The other unit awards are the Republic of Korea Presidential Unit Citation and the Philippine Presidential Unit Citation, both of which may be worn only by members of Honor Guard formations or upon special occasions prescribed by the Division commander.

Only those awards individually earned may be pinned to the blouse above the left breast pocket.
